

International Week for Teaching and Non-Teaching Staff at Budapest Metropolitan University

10-13 April 2017
Budapest, Hungary

Budapest Metropolitan University is pleased to invite instructors and support staff members to its exciting spring I-Week event taking place from 10 to 13 April, 2017.

The theme, Creativity and Internationalization reflects two major challenges higher education institutions face today: how to develop creative thinking and how to enhance the process of internationalization to offer better experience and better outcomes for students in a multicultural environment.

This spring METU aims to bring teaching and non-teaching professionals together by offering a platform to discuss key challenges, exchange ideas and share best practices related to the above topics in addition to offering a great opportunity to network and discover potential ways of future cooperation with old and new partner institutions.

- METU I-Week will include the following events:
- Welcome Meeting and networking
  - Opening lecture
  - University/country presentations
  - University poster session
  - Lectures integrated into regular classes
  - Staff visits to institutes and support service departments
  - Campus tour
  - Social activities

The events are hosted by the Faculty of Communication and Arts and the Faculty of Tourism and Economics at their respective campuses. Application is open until 19 March, 2017. Join us by clicking on the APPLY NOW option below.

In the application please include the following information: name, title, position, sending institution, faculty/department, brief academic/professional background, planned presentation topic and the department you would like to visit.
